Cuticura
From the Hon. WM. TAYLOR, State Senator of Massachusetts.

MESSRS. WEEKS & POTTER: Gentlemen,—To say that I am grateful, is only a poor expression of my feelings, but it is the best word I can use, for I feel it in every sense of the word. I have been a great sufferer with skin diseases for the last twelve (12) years. My head and face being covered with sores, I could not rest with the burning heat and itching of the parts affected, and was confined to my house for weeks at a time. My disease has been called Eczema, of a most aggravated type, by many physicians, but I doubt if ever fully understood by any of them. It was more like a combination of several skin humors. I have spent much money seeking a cure, and in 1867 I went to Europe, and consulted some of the best physicians in London. I received temporary relief only, for in the spring it would break out again as bad as ever. When I came back to Boston, I was told by many friends that Dr. ——— (whose reputation for the cure of those diseases was of the highest order) could cure me. I waited on the doctor; he prescribed for me. I followed his advice for six months, and I can safely say, without any improvement. I tried other physicians, and among them Dr. ———, of East Boston, and Dr. ———, of city proper, but all to no purpose. They did me no good; their remedies were so ineffectual that at no time did I feel that a cure would result from them.

I have swallowed five hundred arsenic pills, 5.24 grain, and taken bottle after bottle of internal remedies, besides all the external applications I have used, but the effect was the same. I became satisfied that I could not be cured, but might be kept from getting worse.

Now, about three months ago, Mr. Mehan, a gentleman well known to Boston people, called my attention to your CUTICURA, and promised wonderful results if I would only make a trial. He told me of his own experience with it, and so persevered on me that I went with him to a drug store and bought two large boxes of Cuticura and some Cuticura Soap, and commenced to use according to the directions. There was so much humor lodged within the skin, that as soon as I commenced the use of Cuticura it came to the surface and festered, until vast quantities had come out and greatly intensified my sufferings for about two weeks. But I did not mind this, as I felt that I was going to get rid of the humor when I saw it coming to the surface in such large quantities. After the first two or three weeks' use of this remedy, I was greatly encouraged by a gradual lessening of the inflammation of a number of painful sores.

I carefully, faithfully, and cheerfully followed the directions to the letter, feeling each week nearer a cure, until at the present moment, after three months' use of Cuticura, and twelve years of almost constant suffering as was ever endured, I can say that I am cured, and pronounce my case the most remarkable on record. I have been so elated with my success that I have stopped men on the street who were afflicted, and told them to get Cuticura and it would cure them. This is why I am so grateful to you, for I believe it to be the best and greatest discovery of the age, and that it will cure all who are suffering with these diseases. I may add that I took no internal medicine but the Cuticura Resolvent. WILLIAM TAYLOR.

...R'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD- ...IL AND LIME. The advantage of

The church seems crowded with paintings, monumental statutes antique fonts, sculptured with pagan emblems in relief, with tracery of skilfully designed iron gates, which divide the chapels from the nave. These chapels belong to the different old patrician families, and possess interesting pictures by the masters of the day. In those from whose grandeur sprang a cardinal the "berratta," or red hat, with its dusty tassels, is suspended.

In the Seripandi Chapel an Annunciation, by Perugino, is perhaps, as curious as any, from the introduction of Cardinal Caraffa, kneeling by the side of the virgin. The picture is much defaced.

The Minutoli chapel is noted as the scene of Boccaccio's story of the Jocky from Perugia who stole the ruby from the corpse of Archbishop Mintolo. But the thing of all others for which the cathedral is famed is the marvellous miracle of the liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius, which takes place there three times a year, in May, September, and December. St. Gennaro, or Januarius, is patron saint of Naples, and was offered to the lions to be eaten, as martyr at Pozzuoli, some centuries since, but they, recognizing his sanctity, prostrated themselves before him. And this miracle converting too many souls to Christianity, Gennaro was ordered by Diocletian to be executed, and his head was cut off, at the crater of Solfatara, A. D. 305. Then his body was buried in various and divers places, first at Pozzuoli, then at Naples, at Beneventura, and removed to an abbey of Monte Vergine, and forgotten, until the high altar being pulled down in the abbey the saint was discovered behind it, and in 1497 his remains were reconducted, in great state, to Naples, and deposited in the cathedral. The miracle is that the sacred head of Saint Gennaro being held near his bottled blood, which looks like dried glue, causes the blood to dissolve and become fresh blood again, as it was when some pious woman sopped it up at the time of the martyrdom, and preserved it for the glory of the church and the honor of the saints.

Now when we three heretics out for a "sight-saw," as Duncan says, entered the cathedral, mass was being served by the scarlet and white robed priests, so we went softly, not to disturb them, by the high altar with its curious mosaic chancel of different colored marbles down a short double flight of steps into the sculptured subterranean chapel called the "Confession of San Gennaro," built in 1496 by Cardinal Caraffa. Here is the body of the saint beneath the high altar, and near it the fine kneeling statue of the Cardinal, a striking figure of noble presence, and must have been an admirable portrait. The guide was careful to make us observe the superior quality of the marble by holding up the wax taper to the Cardinal's nose in order to show how transparent it was! I fancy the Cardinal would not have liked it if he had known; it was worse than stopping the hole with great Cæsar.

We were invited to look at a finger of the saint set in a silver socket, but I declined. I could not see how his body could be in the shrine, and his blood in a bottle, his head in a silver case and his finger in a silver socket, when he was eaten by wild beasts at Pozzuoli; but Fay reproved me as a faithless Unitarian, and declared that was nothing for the holy church to do, "beside," said she dryly, "don't John Murray say the lions and he did not agree, and he lost his head by another kind of cratur?"

Sure enough; I was silenced if not convinced.

On our way to the beautiful chapel of St. Gennaro or Cappella del Tesoro we walked about a little in the basilica of St. Restituta, once the cathedral for the great ritual, and which rests on the site of a temple of Apollo, the temple probably furnishing the antique Corinthian columns in the tribune. On the ceiling is a painting of angels carrying St. Restituta's body in a boat to Ischia, and with a laudable desire to store young Duncan's mind with useful lore, we related to him in alternate strophes like the Greek chorus, the lamentable history of that saint; how she was cast into the sea by her pagan father and sisters for being a Christian, and the sea brought the cask containing her to the shore of the island of Ischia, how the good fishermen rescued her, built a church in her honor, and held her as patron saint of the island, &c. On concluding by saying that she came from Africa and was black, we were rewarded for our efforts by Duncan's nether lip being thrust out with the remark, "I hate niggers!"

"Sight-sawing's not good for some people," pertinently observed Fay, as she gathered her skirts about her, preparatory to the mental absorption of the saint's chapel.

From my own concentrated attention on my guide book, I glanced over to where she was standing, tapping her pencil against her front teeth; she caught my eye and said, "How much is 500,000 ducats? This chapel was completed in 29 years, and cost 500,000 ducats."

"O let's take J. M.'s word for it then; look at these wonderful bronze gates that cost 32,000 ducats and 45 years of labor; it makes my very head hum to think of it, see, the arms of the family are wrought in the centre."

The form of this lovely chapel is that of a Greek cross, and it has seventeen altars and forty-two columns of variegated marble within it. In the niches between the altars are nineteen statues of saints, different protectors of Naples. Pictures by Domenichino and Spagnoletto painted on copper, decorate the chapel, and in the sacristy is the silver bust of St. Gennaro made for Charles II. of Anjou in 1305 loaded with jewels, while silver statues both large and small stand all about.

Some of the mural decorations, arabesques for example, were taken from the ruins at Pozzuoli. Above the light wrought iron gates of the chapels, the heraldic shield of the family is carved in marble, or cast in bronze.

As we returned to the church again we saw penitents making their confession. Confessional boxes looking like carved sentry boxes with half doors in front and a tin colander inserted in the side, were placed along the nave; women were kneeling before them confessing to the priests within, some of whom were taking snuff, some indifferently paring their nails as they listened with a bored and weary aspect to the recital. Alas, that griefs and sins should become so commonplace and wearisome to hear?

When the confession is ended the penitent comes round to the open front of the box, kisses the priest's hand, and making a deep reverence goes away. Sometimes the priests sits placidly reading his breviary and rests his hand on one end of what looks like a long fishing pole swung by his side: when penitents kneel before him he glances up, and taps them gently on the head with his pole, and resumes his reading.

This operation is sadly provocative ...udden laughter on the part of uninit... visitors. We bought some hot roasted chestnuts out of a braisier where a man cooked them in the street, and being at a loss to know where to put them lest we be burnt with them in our pockets, our coachman very kindly proffered us his pocket-handkerchief, a grimy blue cotton one, to put them in. We could not accept such a sacrifice on his part, and so thanked him much, and put the chestnuts inside my yellow parasol and carried them into church with us. Duncan marched along in front holding his little hat in one hand, and in the other the parasol carefully gathered together at the top for fear the chestnuts would roll out and clatter disgracefully on the marble floor.

Finding ourselves refreshed by our hot chestnuts and our silence, we gave the order, "San Martino," and amused ourselves by simply opening our eyes to the queer panorama in the streets.

From the broad Toledo, we had passed into a narrow street hung with miles of drying clothes, for the Neapolitans accomplish the washing of other people's linen if they do not of their own.

Up the steep hill which leads to the castle of St. Elmo to which the monastery and church of St. Martino is attached, English people, very warm and red-faced, were going on tiny donkeys which stopped occasionally to utter a dismal bray under their burden. Queer old dried-up women with yellow kerchiefs on their heads lolled in the sun among the goats, the donkeys, the geese and dogs; strings of macaroni hung like skeins of wet yarn across the door-ways, and young women with masses of shining black hair with silver pins in it, towered up among the swarthy insignificant looking Italian men. Some children nodded at us in a succession of nods, and a few ran out for "biocchi," but it was a "festa" day, and both mothers and children were too deeply engaged in entomological researches to notice us much.

Since the fall of the Bourbons St. Elmo has been used only as a military prison. As we passed, some men were unloading huge loaves of black bread from a rope net. In the courtyard the ashes and fine shining dust from Vesuvius still crackle under the foot, but what a lovely view greets the eyes from the ramparts! The blue bay of Naples with the half circle of the city engirdling it, the old Castel d'Ovo set far out in the bay, so far that it must have been put there by enchantment for mortals to hold parleys with the sea-nymphs who surely must rise from their enchanting water-dwellings to look at the lovelier ring of earth and sky that surrounds them! Pity that it is only a fancy and that the Castel d'Ovo is where the divers dip down for coral and the fishermen drag the translated sea-nymphs to the surface in prosaic guise of oysters and lobsters!

The soldiers at St. Elmo stand on guard near the church of St. Martino. The monastery belonging to it is suppressed, but five monks remaining and these Dominican, instead of the Carthusian brethren to whose order the church belonged. Of those monasteries seized by the government for their use as prison, military schools, hospitals, &c., the monks belonging to them can remain monks, or go out in the world to gain their bread as they please, but if their old familiar habits are too strong in them, or they lack courage to face the unknown, they must be collected together in one general establishment, the different orders still retaining their own rules and dress, allowed a small pension from the government, but no new converts must be made or accepted by them.

The hand of progress has an iron grasp. For a time, at least, these few poor white-flanneled-gowned Dominicans keep company in the silent, deserted space of beautiful St. Martino.

The church itself is of great interest. So many associations of the famous names in painting and sculpture crowd into your thoughts as you enter the once sacred and celebrated edifice, now so forlorn and desolate; the beautiful creations of religious thought wrought out in all the forms of beauty that genius could devise or skill execute, are now only seen by the "forestieri;" the great gardens and vineyards are turned into a market garden. The church itself dates from 1325, but was entirely rebuilt in the middle of the 15th century and is now one of the most splendidly decorated churches in Europe; the floors, the piers, the walls being encased in variegated marbles, while the vaults and arches are everywhere covered by brilliant and beautiful frescoes. Four chapels open on each side of the nave and behind the high altar is the choir separated from the nave by a most elaborate screen of openwork marble in which narrow bands of malachite and lapis lazuli define the border and a flower-like arabesque of gray lies between an inlaying of silver and black marble.

Two statues occupy niches in the choir, and on the pilasters at either side are colossal rosettes sculptured in gray basalt by Fansaga, while the marble mosaic pavement was the work of the Carthusian monk Presti. In the vestibule of the church there are rude frescoes representing the pretended massacre of the Carthusian monks in England in the reign of Henry VIII. The roof of the nave is painted in fresco with the Ascension, and between the windows are the twelve apostles, all the work of Lanfranco. The choir, as well as the sacristy is rich in works of art. Here Domenichino, Guido, Spagnoletto, Stanzioni, Cav. d' Arpino, Lanfranco, Michael Angelo, Caravaggio, not to mention the crowds of lesser artists who contended, even to poisoning one another, for the honor of painting the church and chapels, have spent their talent and skill. Guido's last work, a "Nativity," for which the monks of St. Martino paid 2,000 crowns, though Guido died before its completion, is here. Spagnoletto's master-piece, the "Deposition from the Cross," hangs over the altar of the sacristy, and he painted the twelve figures of the apostles in the angles over the arches of the chapels in the nave beside the two paintings near the main entrance, of Moses and Elias. In the choir a Last Supper is by him; opposite it is another Last Supper by Stanzioni, and the "Institution of the Eucharist," which bears the signature "Pauli Caliarii Veronensis." In the sacristy a crucifixion by Cav. d' Arpino, also his best work, is seen.

Who, knowing the jealous nature of Spagnoletto, or "the little Spaniard," as the Neapolitans called him, can doubt in looking at the blurred surface of a "Deposition" by Stanzioni, over the entrance, the story of the monk's employing Spagnoletto to cleanse the picture, and his using some corrosive liquids which nearly ruined it? or that Stanzioni would never allow his work to be touched again, but said it should stand as a monument of his great teacher's enmity and malignity? After all, one cannot help a feeling of pity for Spagnoletto. Loaded with honors and wealth, jealously proud of them, and of his two beautiful daughters, he died, no one knows where, of grief and shame at the fate of the elder, Rosa Marie, who was the victim of his friend and patron, Prince John, of Austria, who returned the splendid hospitality of Spagnoletto at Naples, by carrying off his daughter, afterwards abandoning her at Palermo and resuming his princely career; but Spagnoletto's heart was broken. The whole interior of the church is like a huge bit of Florentine mosaic; one could scarcely believe there existed so many exquisite varieties of color in marble until seeing them here. All the soft shades of gray and brown, yellow black and white are mingled in arabesque or Greek design. Leaves, flowers, gigantic buds, each different, are on every pillar, while the roof, crossed by lines of dark-brown carving, like fir cones, produce an effect similar to that of an old-fashioned India shawl in its dull richness of tone.

Everywhere the eye rests with delight, from the pavement to the ornately carved stalls of ebony. The dark wood presses in the sacristy contain the sacred vestments. Holy relics and gold embroidered bones of the saints, perhaps more interesting to the faithful than to visitors. How can bones be embroidered? A fine gold wire is netted over them; probably the cheerful occupation of some piously inclined sisterhood. The panels of these presses are carved in ebony and inlaid in silver and ivory like the daintiest India boxes. Here are landscapes, interior of houses, gay parties dancing, seen through porticos, or beyond vine-twisted balustrade. It is almost hopeless to imagine how such effects could be produced in such materials.

Painted on the walls above, like a frieze, are banners, half-hanging from the walls, and torn, so skillfully done you wonder why somebody does not nail them up. And on the ceiling beside the large center piece are small square gilt-framed panels out of which little angels peep down at you. The figures of saints painted with shades of pale brown are placed alternately with distemper painting of Biblical scenes set in square gold frames. Jacob's dream, with the angels going up and down on a beam of light, instead of a ladder; the land of Canaan with men bringing grapes and honey; then comes in brighter colors, also carved gilt frames, the loveliest angels, each bearing an instrument of the passion, one the cross, another the crown, the sponge, the nails and pincers, while the last of all holds up a crown of white roses; now in larger ovals come the women of the Bible; Miriam with her timbrel, and her dark, haughty eyes, Ruth, amid the corn, and in the center of all shines the Virgin in Heaven!

Is not this a ceiling to be grateful for seeing?

At one end of the long room a fresco represents steps, down which angels are coming with white, gleaming wings, to announce to Joseph the birth of the Saviour. For once it is satisfactory to see Joseph treated with some consideration; he is usually tucked so far in the background as to enlist one's sympathies for the poor foster-father.

The cloisters, which form a great quadrangle with 16 doric columns of white marble on each side, and set about with statues, invite one to sit down on the edge of the marble walk and bask in the spicy air. We all did so. Close to this quiet, shaded retreat, where the sun strikes aslant the box-borders of the grass-grown enclosure, sending up a faint, aromatic fragrance, is the "Succusale," or appendage to the Naples Museum.

The "Succusale" consists of several large rooms connected with one another, and filled with rare and curious things that once belonged to the monastery, from Venetian mirrors, with garlands of flowers and figures of graceful dancing girls and youth engraved upon them in a fashion now lost, rock-crystal vases and silver-frosted church service, old Sienese furniture, ivory and bronze work of the 16th century down to the clumsy gilded coach of Charles III., and the banners carried in procession at the time of the plague in 1836.

Two rooms were full of the valuable Capodimonte porcelain which is no longer manufactured. In one room the floor itself was made of it in designs of the signs of the zodiac with huge snakes in high relief, twisting here and there among them. Apropos; there is at the royal palace at Capodimonte a small room, perhaps twelve feet square, furnished entirely with this porcelain, which was formerly made at Capodimonte. The ceilings and walls, the chairs, ottomans and chandeliers, the very doors and window-frames are all of them made of this brittle ware.

It has a very odd effect. The ground of the porcelain is white, with raise colored figures in high relief upon it of fruit and flowers, monkeys, little Chinese men and women in gay dress, birds, squirrels, butterflies scattered in between leafy arabesques of quaint pattern. A mandarin nods to you from a leaf of vivid green, or a monkey grimaces from out a half opened nut—there is no end to the fanciful conceits! Even the panels of the door were covered with gaudy tulips and roses with their leaves. At a little distance the room looks like a piece of byzantine or "rough" mosaic on a large scale. It was a room excellently adapted for people who cultivate "repose of manner." But to return to the "Succusale." The guide said to me, "Look behind you, Signora." I turned quickly, and in a niche was such a malicious looking monk sitting in a leathern chair and pointing the shrivelled finger at me that I nearly shrieked aloud; but I soon found he was of wax and harmless, though he had a story. He had been (or his double) a monk of St. Martino, but for some reason or other he was refused burial among his fellows, so his likeness was made in yellow wax, too faithfully portraying his wrinkled visage and black beady eyes, and set up comfortably in a chair, dressed in his own brown clothes to startle all beholders with his disagreeably natural appearance.

As we came home we stopped a moment before a street booth to ascertain what certain blackish puddings therein displayed might be; on inquiry, the vender said they were blood puddings and molto buono; such puddings as Hudibras carried in his trund hose, perhaps. We believed in their excellence, but declined to taste, though we were urged. Near the booth some Italians were singing, and drinking red wine under a straw awning, Viva l' Italia!

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS IN MAINE.

On the first and second Mondays in March the greater part of the municipal elections in Maine are held. In States like Maine and New Hampshire party lines are maintained in local affairs, particularly when the previous campaigns have been characterized with unusual party feeling, and when exciting questions have agitated the popular mind. The elections this year will be watched with more than ordinary interest, because the people will, in the cities and larger towns, have an opportunity to express their opinion upon the Garcelon usurpation. Reports from various sections in Maine indicate that that issue will enter largely into the elections, and that in the cities particularly full votes will be polled. There are indications, also, that the Fusionists will make special efforts to hold their own. We trust that our Republican friends, so long as this is to be an issue, will rally in force to rebuke the party leaders that concocted and made desperate efforts to execute a plot to destroy popular government in Maine.

[From the same March 2.]

Reports from Maine indicate that the voters in that State took occasion in many of the larger places to pronounce against the "counting-out" conspiracy and the combination which attempted to overthrow popular government in that State. The largely increased Republican majorities in the larger places should teach the Fusion leaders that counting out the elected Representatives of the people and the disfranchisement of whole cities and towns by altering and forging election returns cannot be practiced with impunity in a Northern State. The results indicate an old-fashioned Republican majority in Maine next September.

[From the Providence Journal.

The municipal elections in Maine yesterday manifested the sentiments of the people relative to the Fusionist frauds. The Republican gains were almost universal, and in some cases very remarkable. As for instance, the counted-out Representative from Skowhegan was elected First Selectman by a vote of 401 to 136.

MR. BLAINE'S POPULARITY IN OHIO.

[An Ohio Congressman to N. Y. Tribune Correspondent].

"Now, as for Senator Blaine," continued the speaker, "you can have no idea of the enthusiasm his presence in Ohio inspired last Autumn. At one meeting which I attended there were between 30,000 and 40,000 people present, and the whole town was dressed in flags and streamers, the decorations having been spontaneous and not prepared in pursuance of any organized plan. The house at which he stopped was thronged from morning until night. The procession which escorted him to the meeting was a remarkable one. In it was represented every industry of our people. Men were seen running printing presses, making iron, and many other of our manufactured products on wagons. In the public square the procession was detained for a long time, and I think that at least 10,000 men must have pressed up to Mr. Blaine's carriage to shake hands with him. Four out of every five remarked as they took his hand, 'I hope to vote for you for President, Mr. Blaine,' or 'I expect to vote for you in 1880, Senator. It was a mistake that we did not have a chance to do so before.' I only mention these circumstances to show you that in Ohio Mr. Blaine is the most popular man in public life. If he should be nominated we should see such an uprising of the Republicans as has not been witnessed in recent years."

AN INTERESTING DEBATE.

THE DEMOCRATIC SENATE SEEKING TO "WIPE OUT" ALL DISTINCTION BETWEEN TREASON AND LOYALTY.

[Special Cor. Boston Journal.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. Senator Whyte endeavored to quietly secure the passage of a bill enabling J. Haskell of Maryland, who served in the Confederate army, to hold a commission in the regular army. Senator Edmunds asked for the law prohibiting Confederates from serving in the United States army. Senator Bayard explained that this was an exceptional case, Haskell having served in the rebel army when a boy.

Senator Edmunds in his decisive way, showed that the special merit of this man was not that like Lee, he went with his State, but that he went from the loyal State of Maryland to serve under the disloyal flag of Virginia. It was thus that every safeguard of liberty and of equal rights is to be swept from the statute book. One by one the laws upholding the Union are assailed that State sovereignties may again have full sway. It was evident that the Senator from Vermont troubled the Democrats who had informal confabs while he was speaking.

Senator Whyte endeavored to throw oil on the waters by saying in a conciliatory tone that the young man was a grandson of President Monroe and the son of the Surgeon General of the army. His mother was a Virginian and he was born in Virginia. He is now an applicant for the office of Paymaster in the army.

Senator Thurman took the ground that the country should have the services of every able-bodied man. The best of the Northern people want to bury the memories of the war and they want the services of every man.

Gen. Logan spoke with no uncertain sound. Men who were in the army prior to the war, and who entered the Confederate army, can, if this section is repealed, be reappointed in the Federal army and placed on the retired list, to be supported by the Government. He claimed that there should be a distinction in the army between those who fought for the Union and those who fought to destroy it.

Senator Garland of Arkansas offered as a substitute a bill repealing the section of the Revised Statutes excluding Confederates from the Union army. The substitute was adopted. A vote was then taken on the third reading of the bill as amended, the Democrats voting aye and the Republicans nay.

The vote on the third reading was 36 ayes against 23 nays. Senator Edmunds then opposed the passage of the bill and the political debate commenced.

Senator Thurman undertook to show that in time of war the Confederates would be needed.

Senator Logan said that he had said that when war should come it would be time to consider the question. For himself, in peace or in war, he should only commission men who had been loyal to the Union.

Senator Edmunds repudiated the assertion that the North has any hatred toward the South. They believed that there is a right side and a wrong side to every question, and that they were right. Consequently they are not disposed to yield.

At the expiration of the morning hour Senator Whyte moved to postpone the pending question and continue the consideration of the bill.

Senator Hoar urged the consideration of the Alabama claims bill and other important questions now before the Senate.

Senator Burnside made an explanation of a case of restoration which had been referred to, and Senator Whyte then concluded to postpone the consideration of the repeal bill, which was done.

FOR PRESIDENT, JAMES G. BLAINE.

SPEECH OF W. S. PETERSON, EDITOR OF THE WARREN (O.) TRIBUNE, AT THE BLAINE MASS MEETING IN COLUMBUS, O., FEB. 19, 1880.

MR. PRESIDENT AND FELLOW-CITIZENS:—There are two good and sufficient reasons for the nomination of James G. Blaine. First, the Nation needs his services in the Presidency, is conscious of the need, and earnestly calls him to the highest position of honor and duty. Secondly, Mr. Blaine is worthy of the Nation's confidence, and able to meet the highest expectations of his countrymen.

The Nation needs him because the old, irrepressible conflict between narrow sectionalism and broad Nationality is still waged with unabated vigor, and is likely to be continued for years to come. The war destroyed the legality but not the reality of slavery. It defeated for a time, but did not exterminate, the doctrine of state sovereignty. The men who waged the war against the Union are as bitter today in their hostility to true Republicanism as they were before they were disarmed. The lash of the slave driver and the sword of the rebel have been succeeded by the cunning of the ballot-box stuffer and the shot-gun of the bulldozer. The Confederate Congress of Richmond has been succeeded by the Confederate caucus of Washington. The open and daring methods of Davis and Lee have been laid aside for the more promising plans of the political thief and burglar. The Capitol and White House may be no longer in danger of shot and shell, but the very foundations of free government are threatened by the underground approaches of the enemy's sappers and miners. Under such circumstances the Nation needs a man at the head of affairs who thoroughly understands the situation, who has demonstrated his courage and his wisdom in the conflicts of the past, and whose high and noble character will command the confidence and arouse the enthusiasm of every friend of the Republic. That man is James G. Blaine. [Applause.] He is pre-eminently a National man. He is not the property of any mere State. [Applause.]

It has been said of the men of the South that they never speak of themselves as Americans or as citizens of the United States. The Southern man says, I am a Virginian, or a Georgian, or a Mississippian, as the case may be. There seems to be a little danger that some Ohio Republicans will fall into the same unpatriotic style of talk. The vanity of State pride is near akin to the heresy of State Rights. It may be a very good thing to be the favorite son of a State, but it is vastly better and more honorable to be the favorite son of the Republic. The States are many and their families are large. The Republic is one, and has only a few favorite sons—and James G. Blaine is the biggest, bravest, noblest boy of them all. [Great applause.] The men who support him, while condemning the doctrine of State sovereignty, are not blinded by the foolish vanity of State pride. He will not be the candidate of a mere State or section, but of the whole great Republican party of the United States; and when elected, he will not be spoken of as the guardian, or the tool, of a few State politicians, but as the President of the whole Nation. [Applause.]

Gentlemen, the popular word "boom" had its origin among the boatmen of the west, who use it to describe a rise in the rivers. Every year there is what is called the "June rise" in the Mississippi. I have stood on the banks of that noble river when its mighty but silent flood rose steadily and irresistibly hour by hour and day by day until all the lowlands were covered, and driftwood and fences were borne away on its bosom with a sweep and power that filled one with awe as if he were standing in the presence of the Infinite.

So rises the boom for Blaine. The winter is an open one and the rise begins early. It will reach its highest point in June! [Laughter and applause.] Already it is more than a boom—it is a flood. Somebody's "fences" are already scattered in every direction. The best thing that his hired men can do is to gather the floating rails and pile them up somewhere for future use. The "fences" can't be rebuilt this year in time to make a crop. [Great laughter and long-continued applause.]

Seriously, gentlemen, the Nation needs a President for the next term who has clearly-defined ideas of right and wrong; who believes with all his heart in the righteousness of the great principles of the Republican party, and of the measures it has used to uphold them, and who has the courage to stand by his convictions. We want no narrow issues for the coming campaign. The broad, deep, eternal principles of Republicanism as they were taught and practiced in the days of Sumner, and Thaddeus Stevens and Abraham Lincoln must be the principles on which we fight the coming battle. James G. Blaine cannot stand on a platform that is too narrow for the whole Republican party. His very name recalls the grand history of that party with which he has been identified from the beginning. And it suggests for the future the grander work which remains for that party to do; the protection of every citizen, black and white, on every foot of American soil, North and South, in all the rights and privileges of citizenship; the freedom of speech, the freedom of suffrage, the honest counting of the people's ballots, and a firm maintenance of the National authority in all the States. [Great applause.] Such a platform is worthy of the party, and James G. Blaine is worthy of the platform. [Applause.]

Stand aside, little men and little questions! Make way for Freedom and Nationality, and for the Nation's standard-bearer, James G. Blaine! [Applause.]

THE NATIONAL REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

There will be 766 delegates to the National Republican Convention, which is to meet at Chicago, June 3. Necessary to a choice, 384. The Convention of 1876 met at Cincinnati on the 14th of June, and permanent officers were chosen on the 15th, the rules and orders of business were adopted, the resolutions were adopted, and candidates were placed in nomination.—On the 16th seven ballots were taken, with the following result:

	1st	2d.	3d.	4th	5th.	6th.	7th.
Hayes,	61	64	67	68	104	113	384

Nec's'ry to choice	378	378	378	378	378	378	379

On motion of Mr. Frye, of Maine, Mr. Hayes was unanimously declared the nominee of the convention. On the second ballot for a candidate for President four delegates from Pennsylvania demanded that under the sixth rule of the convention they had a right to record their votes independently of a majority of the delegation. The Chair so ruled; exceptions were taken, but the ruling was sustained by a vote by States—yeas, 395; nays, 354.

Security of Life Insurance.

There is nothing in the commercial world which approaches, even remotely, to the security of a well-established and prudently managed Life Assurance Company.—Professor de Morgan.

No one doubts the security of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company, and it is prudently managed, for the ratio of expense of management to receipts in 1879, was only 6 51 per cent.

PENOBSCOT, SS. At the Supreme Judicial Court which was begun and holden at Bangor, within and for the County of Penobscot, on the first Tuesday, being the 6th day of January, A. D. 1880.

John B. P. Wheelden, of Bangor, in the County of Penobscot, Plaintiff, vs.

William H. Smith, of Brooklyn, in County of Kings, and State of New York, Defendant.

In a plea of the case, for that the said Deft. at said Bangor, on the 29th day of August, 1879, hired of the Plff. a certain horse then and there owned by Plff., to drive from said Bangor, to Belfast, in the County of Waldo, and use there, at and about said Belfast, for a week from said 29th day of August, A. D. 1879, and then drive back to said Bangor, for a certain sum of money, to wit: the sum of two dollars per day, and the Plff. then and there delivered to the said Deft. the said horse to drive and use as aforesaid, and the said Deft. on the said 29th day of August, A. D. 1879, and the following day, to wit, the 30th day of August, A. D. 1879, by his servant and agent so carelessly, immoderately and recklessly drove said horse, that by reason thereof and for want of due care of the said horse, the said horse was thereby spoiled and his value wholly lost to the Plff.

Also for that the Plff. at Belfast, Waldo County, Maine, on the 29th day of August, A. D. 1879, was possessed of a certain mare of chestnut color, of the value of four hundred dollars, and being so possessed, thereafterwards, on the same day lost the same, and the same thereafterwards, on the same day came into the hands and possession of the said Deft., yet the said Deft., though he well knew the same to belong to said Plff., yet intending to injure and defraud him thereof, refused to deliver the same to said Plff., though thereto requested, but thereafterwards on the same day, converted the same to his own use.

Writ dated December 13th, 1879.

Attachment of real estate in Penobscot County, State of Maine, December 13th, 1879, returnable to the January Term of the Supreme Judicial Court begun and holden as aforesaid on the first Tuesday of January, A. D. 1880.

STATE OF MAINE.

PENOBSCOT, ss. Supreme Judicial Court, January Term, 1880.

John B. P. Wheelden, vs. William H. Smith.

And now the Court order that the Plaintiff give notice to the said William H. Smith of the pendency of said suit, by publishing an abstract of the Writ in said action, with the Officer's Return and this order of Court thereon, three weeks successively in the Bangor Daily Whig and Courier, a paper published in Bangor in said County, the last publication to be thirty days, at least, before the next term of said Court, to be holden at Bangor in and for said County, on the first Tuesday of April next that he may then and there appear, in our said Court, and answer to said suit if he see fit.

Attest, RUEL SMITH, Clerk.

It still obviated the necessity of removal by address, which should only be used in cases of great importance. The great object sought was to provide a tribunal which would give a speedy trial, and have the bill apply only to county officers. He favored the amendment offered by the gentleman from Camden because it strikes at the root of all objections. The amendment was adopted.

Verrill of Portland moved to amend so that judgment in favor of petitioner shall be rendered if it be found upon hearing that he is entitled thereto. Adopted.

Rowell, Hatch Jewett and Dickey spoke briefly.

On motion of Young the order was tabled.

Bill to incorporate the Canton Bridge Co., came up on its passage and favored by Strout of Portland. On motion of Hutchinson of Lewiston, it was tabled so that the facts could be investigated.

The Swan-Harriman Bribery Charges

There was a large attendance in Representatives' Hall this afternoon when T. B Swan, of Minot, was cross examined. He repeated his former statements. Ex-Secretary of State, Gove, testified to drawing up the papers at the house of M. V. B Chase. Solon Chase corroborated this portion of testimony. When asked—"If you were on the other side would you have thought it wrong to use bribery to destroy a fraudulent quorum?" Solon replied, "Well, I don't know;" at which there was much laughter and applause and Solon took his seat. Harriman then gave his testimony, which was very similar to that of Swan.

Geo. D Bisbee testified that Swan had told him at the Augusta House, the Monday before the Legislature convened, that he should respect the opinion of the Court and was in favor of admitting the cities at once to representation. Others testified that Swan had declared he did not approve the counting-out and that it would kill the party. Adjourned till Wednesday.

DRISKO'S SECRET TOUR.

How the Fusion Officials at Augusta Furnished Jas. R. Talbot with Information and Blanks to Correct Fusion Returns.

AUGUSTA, March 2. Mr. Hale's Investigating Committee met this afternoon and examined J L Merritt and G. L. Tabbut, Selectmen of Jonesboro and Addison and Geo. W. Drisko, editor of the Machias Union, about the changes made in the election returns in those towns. Messrs Merritt and Tabbut swore that they were informed of errors in the original returns and were handed blank returns with which to make out new ones.

Mr. Drisko stated he was handed several blank returns by Mr. James R. Talbot of East Machias, and told that there were defects in the returns of Cutler, Whiting, Addison and Jonesboro and requested to have them corrected. When he started on his tour through Washington County, Nov 14th, he said he knew of no definite defects, but mentioned several possible defects to the town officers of the various towns through which he passed, which was flatly contradicted by the two gentlemen mentioned.

The morning hour was dispensed with and Mr. Blackburn moved that the House proceed to the consideration of the report of the Committee of the Whole on the revision of the rules. He started his intention to immediately move the previous question and refused to allow a yea and nay vote upon the amendment to rule 21, striking out the proviso allowing political riders on appropriation bills, upon which Congress stated that the Republicans would have a vote on it or they would remain silent a month or two months to prevent a vote on the rules. Mr Blackburn stated that he was acting under the authority of the Committee on Rules.

A resolution calling for information to facilitate the more frequent publication and circulation of commercial reports from diplomatic and consular officers was adopted.

The House proceeded to vote upon amendments Amendment providing that the Clerk of the House shall act as Speaker at the commencement of each Congress, pending the election of Speaker, agreed to; amendment giving the Committee of Commerce full jurisdiction over river and harbor bills, agreed to; amendment giving the Committee of Agriculture jurisdiction over agricultural estimates and appropriations, agreed to, amendment giving the Committee on Public Buildings the right to report appropriations for public buildings, defeated; amendment known as Morrison's substitute for the 21st rule was agreed to; amendment requiring yeas and nays on passage of any appropriation or revenue bill, agreed to; amendments providing that no motion to suspend the rules and pass a public bill shall be entertained unless the bill be referred, printed and distributed was rejected. They know his pure and generous character as displayed by his home life; they have proved his faithfulness and ability in public life by thirteen years of service which he has given them as their immediate representative in Congress, they know him as the country knows him, a renowned statesman, peerless in council and debate, a matchless leader of men, a stalwart defender and supporter of the principles of the Republican party, a man of courage, conviction, honesty and masterly executive capacity, and withal a man prominently fitted in all points to lead the Republican party to victory in the coming national campaign, and to rule over the country wisely and well should he be elected President.

Resolved, That the delegates to the National Republican Convention this day elected by the convention are instructed to use every fair and honorable means of which they are capable to secure the nomination of James G. A Statement from Western Union Telegraph Company

NEW YORK, March 2.—The Western Union Telegraph Company published a statement which explains the methods employed by Gould in obtaining control of the line on the Union Pacific road and braches in violation of injunction and existing contracts, and states that Judge Dillon's opinion in justification of the seizure, is based upon erroneous data. Upon the Union Pacific road the Western Union, by special act of Congress, built, owns, operates and maintains its own lines.

The Kansas Pacific road has no ownership whatever in the lines seized on that road. The statement says no mention is made in the opinion of Judge Dillon as to the seizure of telegraph lines upon the Central Branch of the Union Pacific, St Joseph and Western Railroad, Denver Pacific and Colorado Central Company—These lines were also violently seized by Gould and are now defiantly held irrespective of ownership of Western Union, therein audits rights under existing contracts which have been recognized and observed up to date of seizure.

This omission is certainly significant There is no pretense that the roads last named are in any way connected with the Union Pacific system. The Western Union Co, last night served an injunction on the Union Pacific restraining them from any interference with the Western Union lines. Colorado business for points on the Kansas Pacific is now made from Kansas city by Western Union.

A LONG PUBLIC SERVICE. Executive Councillor Joseph T. Hinckley, of Bluehill, was in the city yesterday on his return to Augusta, after attending the annual town election. Mr. Hinckley has served as a member of the Board of Selectmen of Bluehill every year for the past twenty-six years, and since 1855 has been chairman of the Board. This year he declined to serve again, believing that he had done his share of work as a town officer. A STRANGE ATTACHMENT. Mr. A. N. Reed, a truckman, whose team stands down in Pickering Square, has a small dog that has formed a strange attachment for his master's horse. When Mr. Reed drives down in the square and leaves his team, the dog immediately takes a position on the horse's back and there he remains until the team is moved again. He don't allow any one but his master to approach the team, and we understand that he has nipped several other horses that have walked up and attempted some familiarity with his favorite. When the horse is in the stable the dog remains in the manger every night.

UPSET. Yesterday C. P. Brown, Esq, had a narrow escape from a serious accident. He stepped into his carriage on Kenduskeag bridge and before he had time to take the reins, which were hanging from the top of the carriage, the horse turned round quickly, and as the road was somewhat icy, the wheels slipped and overturned the carriage. Mr. Brown being a large man fell very heavily, but fortunately for him he escaped any serious injuries. Some men in the vicinity went to his assistance and righted the carriage immediately. No damage was done to the team.

The cornet solo by Mr J Delaney, was a splendid performance, and several times during its execution those present showed their appreciation by loud applause. SHAN'T I TAKE A BLUE PILL? No, don't take it and run the risk of mercurial poison, but when billious and constipated get a box of the celebrated Kidney-Wort and it will speedily cure you. It is nature's great remedy for constipation, and for all kidney and liver diseases. It acts promptly on these great organs and so restore strength and vigor. d&w1w.

FEES OF DOCTORS. The fee of doctors is an item that very many persons are interested in just at present We believe the schedule for visits is $3 00, which would tax a man confined to his bed for a year, and in need of a daily visit, over $1,000 a year for medical attendance alone! And one single bottle of Hop Bitters taken in time would save the $1 000 and all the year's sickness.—Ed.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD-LIVER OIL AND LIME The advantage of this compound over the plain Oil is, that the nauseating taste of the Oil is entirely removed, and the whole rendered entirely palatable. The offensive taste of the Oil has long acted as a great objection to its use; but in this form the trouble is entirely obviated. A host of certificates might be given here to testify to the excellence and success of "Wilbor's Cod-Liver Oil and Lime," but the fact that it is regularly prescribed by the medical faculty is sufficient. SUICIDE!

Its Cause and its Great Increase.

Who is Safe from Their Own Hands?

The Will, Passions, Desires, Motives, Fears, Hopes,

ALL HAVE THEIR ORIGIN IN THE NERVOUS CENTERS.

How Important then that the Nervous System should be Healthy, and Restored if Deranged or Weakened in the least.

Suicide is fearfully on the increase, but there is a cause for it The act is never committed by persons who are fully responsible Like insanity in other forms, it is the result of disease, and that disease is nervousness in some form or other, invariably Despondency is one of usual exciting causes But despondency is as much a disease as paralysis or neuralgia, and as much in need of treatment Nervousness is a fearful thing, indeed Who is safe from their own hands while in this condition? And recent facts ask, also whose families are safe when the minds of parents become so deranged by nervousness and depression as to take the lives of their own offspring? When we remember the many clear heads and bright minds that have fallen victims to their own hands we should also remember that, if we are nervous or of a nervous temperament or family, it is dangerous to wait until you cannot control yourself but begin now, while you can do something for yourself if you are nervous, or to prevent it if you are threatened with nervousness You will ask "What shall I do? I will answer that Dr Benson's Celery and Chamomile Pills will uniformly and certainly cure nervous diseases They have cured many cases where everything else has failed, and in cases that have been considered hopeless by the best physicians of this country and Europe They are, perhaps, the most efficient preparation for nervous diseases and indigestion ever discovered or compounded Their success has been marvelous in curing nervousness, nervous headache, sick headache, neuralgia paralysis sleeplessness and indigestion They act as nerve food and a number of nerve matter, and assimilate the other food, taking it with itself and appropriating it to the nervous system This is the great secret of its success [illegible] are simple and natural, but wonderful indeed Read the following statement from the pen of the discoverer, Dr C W Benson

My Celery and Chamomile Pills for the cure of nervous diseases, especially nervous headache, sick headache, dyspeptic headache and [illegible] tonal headache, neuralgia, nervousness and sleeplessness has won for itself a reputation that deserves the attention of the intelligent and reasonable people and is certainly worth a trial in every case of nervous derangement, or of diseases that are caused by nervous irritability or debility. Its success has been so remarkable in such a large number of cases in my hand within the last four years that I have been induced to prepare it for general use It acts directly upon the nervous system is a nerve food and restorer of nerve [illegible] equilibrium quiets nervous irritability, induces natural sleep and cures all kinds of headache and all periodical nervous diseases by restoring to the nervous fluid certain qualities of which it is deficient My pill has been brought to its present state of perfection by long experience much labor and study Therefore I ask a faithful and honest trial of its merits at your hands. It is well worthy of it

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot.

The undersigned, administrator of the estate of William B Reed late of Bangor, in said County, deceased, respectfully represents that the goods and chattels, rights and credits of said deceased are not sufficient to pay his just debts and charges of administration by the sum of about one thousand dollars.

Wherefore your petitioner prays your Honor to grant him power to sell by license at public or private sale, and convey the whole of the following described real estate of the deceased, (including the reversion of the widow's dower therein), as the residue would be greatly depreciated by a sale of any portion, viz The southerly tenement of a three story house on the westerly side of Essex street in said Bangor, and being number 38 on said street, to satisfy said debts, expenses of sale, and charges of administration,

Said real estate is the same described in the Inventory of said deceased's estate on file in the Registry of Probate of said County.
